

Kensington

City of Randwick

Kensington is a suburb in South-Eastern Sydney, in the state of New South Wales. It is located 6 kilometres South-East of the Sydney central business district, in the local government area of the City of Randwick. Colloquially, Kensington is referred to as "Kenso".

Kensington lies to the immediate south of Moore Park and West of Randwick Racecourse. The principal landmarks of the suburb are the main campus of the University of New South Wales, National Institute of Dramatic Art (NIDA), and the exclusive Australian Golf Club. Kensington is also a residential suburb close to the Sydney CBD. There is a mixture of high – and medium – density housing, and free-standing homes for its 11,000 residents.

Kensington has a handful of cafes, restaurants and shops but is heavily influenced by the University of New South Wales and the Racing Industry.

Anzac Parade is the main road through Kensington. Numerous buses frequently service Kensington, linking it with the city and surrounding suburbs. There are no trains or light rail service

On 13 December 2012, the NSW Government announced a commitment to build a $1.6 billion light rail from Circular Quay down George Street to Central Station, then across to Moore Park and down Anzac Parade.

Education;

Schools in the Kensington area include:

- Kensington Public School
- Our Lady of the Rosary Primary School
- Our Lady of the Sacred Heart College (High School).
- University of New South Wales
- The National Institute of Dramatic Art, located opposite to University of New South Wales on Anzac Parade.

Sport;

Randwick is known as the 'Sports Coast', it includes over 10 beaches and bays and many recreation facilities including Coastal Walkways, Randwick Racecourse, Botany Bay National Park, Centennial Park, several top class golf courses, Rugby Clubs (professional and social), Cricket Clubs and Tennis.

